THE ENCYCLOPEDIA

Did you know that Singapore is home to three species of carnivorous pitcher plants? That the Sultan of Johor once offered Singapore as a gift to a Scottish sailor who subsequently rejected it on the grounds that Singapore "could be of no use to a private person"? Or that the world's largest reptile, longest snake and largest venomous snake were found here?

More than two years in the making, Singapore: The Encyclopedia is filled with facts, information and trivia about this country. It is a vivid reference book about the citystate and its people both past and present.

Historical and contemporary figures and events find their place in this 3.2kg, 640-page volume. Richly illustrated with more than 2,000 modern and archival pictures, the book covers a vast array of topics such as Singapore's history, geography, economy, law, politics, arts, culture, entertainment, architecture, food and natural history.

Individuals profiled include artists, musicians, actors, politicians, statesmen, businessmen, entrepreneurs, soldiers, priests, pastors, civil servants, entertainers, ambassadors, judges, sportsmen and even murderers.

If there is one thing to take home from Singapore, about Singapore and by Singapore, it would be this milestone souvenir. Singapore: The Encyclopedia is available at all major bookstores. Priced at $75. Tel: 6332 3223
